

FIVE W'S AND A HUH?

Alistair Graham had a very interesting style of interviewing some very special folks.

(4 4) As if explaining the differences between the mindset of the sexes wasn't tough enough, this poor author had to deal with an other-worldly (maybe Mars or Venus) interview

(5 "4" 6) Alistair mistook this space hero for a space toy that was BFFs with Woody

(7 7-5) He got this former UN Secretary General to tell kids to listen to Bob Marley

(6 4) The Heat was on when he accused this NBA star of not being an athlete and just wanting to hang out with Shaq ..

(4 6) Speaking of NBA stars, he asked the Black Mamba how many springs were inside a basketball

(5 5) This poor LA Police Chief had to deal with being confused with the Microsoft founder ...

(3 8) This former White House director of communications and republican contender for president was so enthralled by his interview he nearly wet his pants from laughing

(4 7) Alistair needed an MIT linguist to explain some of the subtle differences among some "similar" English words in this awkward interview

(4 5) This noted author of "The City and the Pillar" was confused for a hair care product magnate ...

(4 6) This old guy is always appears cantankerous, but his 60 Minutes persona held true when he left the interview early irked by ridiculous questions, poor grammar and claiming a busy schedule .

(1 7 4) Alistair called this former Surgeon General a player hater for declaring that eventually everyone would die