

CARD-CARRYING MOVIE LOVER

- A bank teller played by Bob Hope flees west riding a pig after he is implicated in stealing $50,000 from the institution he works for.
- Brendan Carr's character takes bloody revenge on the half-score D&D miniatures (old style, not the cheap plastic ones you get today) that left him to perish years ago.
- Dean Martin stars in this Star Trek movie where the holodeck goes haywire, trapping the crew in the Old West. There, they catch a card thief cheating at poker, but after they exact their revenge, the crew are bafflingly phasered (non-lethally), one-by-one, until only one remains to solve the mystery.
- Greg Evigan's character dives to the depths of the ocean to confront a bottom-dwelling, bartending menace that refuses to make martinis the way James Bond likes.
- Helen Mirren stars as the monarch of all lower phalanges.
- In this B movie sci-fi thriller, Robert Lansing invents a computer device that, when imbedded in his body, allows him to pass through walls. The device has a fatal flaw, however, in that it only has a few thousand bytes of memory, forcing the inventor to consume electronic devices in order to stay alive.
- In this western, Randolph Scott hunts down the bovines he believes responsible for his wife's death.
- Jim Carrey is an eccentric private investigator who specializes in finding lost airplanes.
- Jonathan Pryce and Anthony Hopkins play the liberal Village Voice and the conservative Wall Street Journal, respectively, trying to find common ground about the future of the news business.
- Johnny Depp portrays a rare book dealer, who comes into possession of a tome that is supposed to be able to summon the Devil. Turns out it only summons a cat from Guadalajara.
- Orson Welles's very, very, very thin character is tragically betrayed by all but his youngest daughter.
- The rise and fall of a crime lord, played by Wesley Snipes, and his gang of thugs who take over the illicit knitting, crochet, and needlecraft industries of the big city.
- Robert Redford's character, a CIA analyst, visits his three Caribbean island vacation homes to discover everyone there is dead...and has to outwit those responsible.
